FOR THE ARTS, HUMANITIES, RECREATION, EDUCATION AND ECOLOGY.

This monthly calendar supported in part by a grant from the San Francisco Foundation.

BALA'S ARTS LAW SERVICES

Bay Area Lawyers for the Arts (BALA), having installed two new staff members in recent months, is heading into its seventh year with a full program of direct legal aid for artists, educational programs and publications.

Since she took over BALA's Executive Director's chair last spring, Laura Dubet-sky, who holds a law degree and is ex-perienced in theater management, has revitalized the board and programs, especially the educational field. These are some of the events planned in the coming weeks:

- Artist/Gallery/Dealer Relations, Nov. 2, with attorney John Merryman, dealer Dorothy Goldeen and artist Toby Judith Klayman. $10 for artists, at the Stephen Wirtz Gallery, 345 Sutter St. SF 1:30-4:30pm.
- Two new clinics will be held monthly—"Contracts & Negotiations" and "Forming Non-Profit Organizations." Each has limited enrollment and enables artists to work through specific problems with an attorney. Each clinic is $15.
- Monthly BALA Orientations will be conducted for individual artists, lawyers or groups. Get to know BALA's facilities, staff and services. Call 775-7200 for information.
- "Music and the Law" will be a panel and luncheon especially for lawyers, Dec. 4. Part of BALA's quarterly series aimed at lawyer education in art law.

Meanwhile, back in BALA's offices, Nan Budinger, whose poems have appeared in Bay Area literary journals, has taken over as Referral Service Coordinator. Artists needing advice from one of BALA's 200 panel attorneys can call Mon.-Fri., 10:30am-5pm.

Starting its second year of keeping artists out of court is BALA's Arts Arbitration and Mediation Services. This national model program helped resolve nearly 50 disputes during its first year. If the drawn out ordeal of litigation is facing you and you'd like to try solving the problem quickly, with minimal pain, ask about this.

BALA's Publications has turned out issues of its quarterly journal, "The Working Arts," written for artists in a clear style, with substantial articles for performers, video and film producers, visual artists, photographers, crafts people and musicians. Coming up is a guide to contracts for those in independent publishing and a revised edition of the handy tax booklet for artists, "The Art of Deduction." For a complete book list and free sample of "The Working Arts," mention the Fort Mason Calendar when you contact BALA.

BALA is located in Building B on the 3rd floor, Fort Mason Center, San Francisco, California 94123. Call 775-7200 for more information.

FRIENDS BENEFITS

FMC is offering, in cooperation with PASS, an after-regular-museum-hours visit to the Edward Hopper Exhibition at the S.F. Museum of Modern Art, on Friday, January 8, 1982 from 6:15 to 9:30. This exhibit has been attracting capacity crowds in New York, and has received superlative reviews. We have been assured that a limited number of tickets will be sold to ensure our viewing pleasure. Make your ticket reservations by mailing us a check, made out to PASS, for the number of ticket reservations you would like. Please write TICKET ORDER on the envelope and send it to FMC, Marina & Laguna, S.F., CA 94123. All ticket orders must be received by Fri., Dec. 10. We will mail the tickets to you as soon as we receive them from PASS.

The Friends of FM are invited to attend the Mexican Museum Members Preview of Folk Art Sale, on Monday, November 2, from 5-8PM. Complimentary wine and cheese will be served. Be sure to bring your membership cards.

Artists in Print is offering our Friends their membership price for the seminar on Illustrating and Photographing the Poster & Calendar. The date is Sunday Nov. 1, from 10-4PM.

On November 13 & 27, Friends are invited to enjoy an evening of Irish Country Dance. There will be live music, entertainment and audience participation. The program will be in Bldg. C, from 8:30 to 11:30PM. Friends pay $3.50/person.

TEKTITE 3

Fort Mason Center is the present home of a unique diving environment—the Tektite III underwater four room townhouse cum-research facility. This 75 ton space age dwelling is designed to house diving scientists on the sea floor for weeks at a time. The habitat brings all the comforts of home to innerspace. Housed in the two upright, interconnected steel cylinders are four separate rooms: crews quarters, bridge, an engine room and the wet room. The crew's quarters are equipped with a microwave oven, refrigerator/freezer, television, stereo, sink, bunks, dining table, etc. Elsewhere in the habitat are a washer, dryer, shower, toilet and trash compactor. The energy demands of the habitat as well as atmospheric gas, food and communications are supplied by a surface buoy or tender vessel.

Built in 1968 and used on two NASA sponsored research projects in the Caribbean, Tektite is now owned by Project Tektite, a nonprofit ocean research corporation.

It is presently undergoing refurbishment to state of the art specifications. When finished it will be placed off the northern California coast for use by marine scientists. The project's first proposed research task will be a habitat based investigation of a nuclear waste dump lying in 60 to 160 feet of water southeast of the Farallon Islands. After a careful shipboard and diver survey of the site (which incidently was first discovered by Tektite divers in 1976), the habitat will be placed in a suitable spot on the bottom near the dump and diving teams composed of marine scientists from throughout the nation will go to work investigating the effects of nuclear waste on the marine environment.

After the Farallon research, Project Tektite plans to use the habitat to study a geothermal bed in the coastal waters off southern Marin County, to study marine aspects of the San Andreas fault, sharks, marine mammals and other features of the marine environment and to carry out a program of marine education and training, including an industry-sponsored program to train blind persons in commercial diving.

A unique aspect of Project Tektite's innovative approach to marine science is that the project represents an effort by private citizens and professionals to operate a major research program without government sponsorship. While the operating costs of the project will eventually be met, at least in part, by grant money, the work of preparing the habitat for use and acquiring the equipment needed to operate the project is being accomplished entirely by volunteers and through donations of money, material and equipment by private businesses and individuals.

Sometime within the next year, Project Tektite plans to submerge the habitat in the waters west of the Golden Gate and with that act initiate a comprehensive, on-going effort to study and seek an understanding of the submarine world of the Pacific.

Project Tektite will provide free lectures, slide shows and tours to school or club groups. For more information call (415) 566-9390 or (415) 771-SEAS.

WEARABLE ART FOR THE URBAN SCHOOL

Cook, Gail Robertson, Carol Voukos, Priscilla Thomas and Susan Tselos will exhibit.

This exhuberant show benefits the Urban School of San Francisco. Founded in 1966, the Urban School combines academic excellence and the creative arts for secondary students who utilize the entire Bay Area as a resource for their education.

The Urban Arts Program, in association with the San Francisco Ballet School, the San Francisco Conservatory of Music, the San Francisco Art Institute and the Academy of Media and Theatre Arts, was established this year. The program gives students with exceptional talent in the performing and visual arts an opportunity to pursue specialized instruction at one of the four major art schools while completing their high school education at the Urban School.

You are cordially invited to attend an evening of wine, chamber music and fashions at the Gala Benefit Reception and Preview of Collection I on Friday, November 6 from 5:30 to 8:30pm here at the Conference Center in Building A. A tax-deductible contribution of $7.50 is requested. Advance reservations may be made by calling the Urban School, 626-2919.
